

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and device is described for the configuration and the remote monitoring of telecommunication network elements that allows the management of a network apparatus through a remotely located generic terminal, that can be either a PC/workstation, configured with the management software developed for the purpose (proprietary software), or any terminal for accessing Internet equipped with a standard browser (fig. 1).